P. T. O.

2. What is the difference between Drama Script and Film Script ? Explain.
3. Discuss the qualities expected from an adapter.
4. Elaborate the characteristics and limitations of audio-visual media.
5. Examine theatrical view of adaptation.
6. Discuss the main characteristics of digital media.
7. Write short notes on any two of the following :
 - (a) Subtitling
 - (b) Sound effect in Radio adaptation
 - (c) Adaptation and Creativity
 - (d) Adaptation of poetry
8. Read the text given below carefully and write a script in Hindi on the basis of its Television adaptation. Remember, it is an audio-visual genre. Therefore, the features of television writing have to be kept in mind, while writing a script :

It was a cold morning, sharp and fresh. It was quiet until the sun came shooting over the hills, lifting the mist from the valley and clearing the blood-shot from the sky. The ground was wet with dew.

On the ground, a broad stretch of grassland, Ranbir and another youth wrestled each other, their muscles rippling, their well-oiled limbs catching the first rays of the sun as it climbed the horizon. Somi sat on his verandah steps; his long hair loose, resting on his knees, drying in the morning sun. Suri was still dead on the world, lost in blankets; he cared not for the morning or the sun.

Rusy stood at the gate until his guardian was comfortably seated behind the wheel of the car, and did not move until it had disappeared round the bend in the road.

The missionary's wife rose unexpectedly from behind a hedge and called : 'Good morning, dear! If you aren't very busy this morning, would you like to give me a hand pruning this hedge ?’

The missionary’s wife was fond of putting Rusy no work in her garden : if it wasn’t cutting the hedge, it was weeding the flower beds and watering the plants, or clearing the garden path of stones, or hunting beetles and ladybirds and dropping them over the wall.
